Excerpt from Foot-Rot of Sheep: Its Nature, Cause, and Treatment The farmers of Maryland and Virginia were taking an increasing interest at this time in improved sheep. They had many discouraging conditions to contend with, and, although it is possible that foot-rot was not known among their flocks at this time, it is certain that much trouble was caused by the appearance of diseases, dogs, and wolves, and that contagious foot-rot made itself known and feared as early as 1832 in these States. Owing to the imperfect knowledge at that time of matters pertaining to bacterial diseases, the sheep owners struggled against the spread of foot-rot in their flocks somewhat unsuccessfully, and it often required constant watchfulness and persistent treatment for three or four years to eradicate the disease after it had become thoroughly established upon the premises of the sheep grower. Later than this, in the late fifties and early sixties, there was a marked revival of interest in sheep raising throughout the Middle West, and at this time many who had previously devoted their energies exclusively to grain or to cattle and hogs concluded to change over to sheep, and the resulting traffic in these animals caused them to be moved about over the country roads and into new sections of the agricultural regions in numbers never before equaled. In several instances these traveling flocks carried foot-rot with them and infected the flocks with which they came in contact along their routes. The States of Ohio, Michigan (southern), Illinois, and Iowa were most seriously infected, and in all of them the disease secured such firm foothold that several years of strenuous combat were necessary before it was even partially...
