The Project to disinter the multitude of all ages, who have been inhumed, some for more than half a century, in the Mechanic Street Burial Ground, is liable to so many valid Objections, that it is difficult, within proper limits, to expose them all, or indeed to exhibit any with that force and fulness which the whole truth would require. If, in our remarks, the selection of topics shall not be the most judicious, care shall be taken to introduce none that is unimportant and if the manner shall fail to be what some might desire, it shall at least be as courteous as may comport with an honest plainness of speech, such as the nature and condition of the subject seem to demand. In respect, then, to...
