Global Terrorism & Security (Two Parts)

By Narayan Singh Rao

Mittal Publications, 2010. Hardcover. Condition: New. Chanakaya, the great political thinker of ancient India, observed that safety and security of a country depends on the ability of the ruler. If the ruler is energetic, his subjects will be also energetic and if a king is lazy, his subjects will be lax. A lazy king is lazy, his subjects will lax. A lazy king may easily fall into the trap of his enemies and cause ruin of a country. He advocated that security of the country must be on top of the priorities of a ruler. A king should seek report on internal and external security from chiefs of armed forces and Intelligence Bureau twice in a day. But it is irony of fate that armed forces are remembered only when incidents like 26/11 occur. Throughout the period of history our rulers forgot the national security doctrine preached by Chanakya. Consequently, the area and size of Bharatvarsha gradually started shrinking. Partition of India in 1947 and occupation of a part of India by a hostile neighbor show the level of our seriousness on national security. We have not been able to tackle a handful of terrorists effectively. Low intensity conflict perpetuated...
